

APS COORDINATOR'S SEMINAR 2008

WHO: Any Coordinator involved in a Productivity Improvement Program where a project has been completed by a Corporate Member of APS since our last session in October 2004 is eligible to attend this seminar.

WHAT: The purpose of this seminar is to maximize the achievements of Coordinators and expand on their knowledge base in order to make their skills and abilities more valuable and worthwhile to the organizations and companies they work with and for.

WHEN: The sessions will begin at 9am, Monday, June 2, 2008 and concluded on Friday, June 6, 2008 in the afternoon.

WHERE: Bangkok, Thailand.

WHY: Because every Coordinator should not allow themselves to stagnate and therefore they must continue to learn and build upon what they helped to accomplish during their various projects. Also, at this seminar the new designation of Certified Productivity Coordinator (CPC) will be announced and previewed.

SPEAKERS:

Dr. Victor Vroom of Yale University, speaking on Decision Making and Leadership

Mr. Patrick Maes, speaking on Organizational Development Themes and how they affect performance

Dr. Robert Peterson of IMPAC University, speaking on Six Sigma

COSTS: APS charges nothing for any Coordinator to attend this seminar. All speaker fees, textbooks and other materials are provided free of charge to each participant. For an equivalent set of sessions, the costs of an event of this caliber could be as high as $5,000 to $10,000 USD.

Each Coordinator or the organization they work for is responsible, though for all of their own travel and hotel expenses for their participants, along with meals and incidentals.

APS will provide one dinner on the night of the graduation ceremony, as well as a welcome event on Sunday evening, June 1, 2008.
